

Source Inspection

Source Inspections are critical for ensuring the quality and compliance of products before they are shipped from the supplier's facility. This service is particularly important in industries where product quality and regulatory compliance are paramount, such as aerospace, defense, automotive, and medical devices.

Our Source Inspection service begins with understanding your product specifications and quality requirements. We conduct on-site inspections at the supplier's facility, reviewing production processes, verifying product dimensions, and conducting functional testing as needed. If issues are identified, we work with the supplier to resolve them before shipment. After the inspection, we provide a detailed report documenting the findings and any actions taken. This service ensures that the products you receive meet your specifications and quality standards, reducing the risk of defects, delays, and non-compliance.
